PROPHET ELIJAH
CHANNELED BY RIZ MIRZA

CIRCLE OF LIGHT PUBLIC
EVENT

In the sacred course channeled through Riz Mirza, the spirit of Prophet Elijah guides us on a journey towards spiritual enlightenment and self-realization. Elijah opens a portal of awareness, reminding us that while we may be physiologically alive, true life is breathed into us through conscious, mindful inhalation of the nourishing energies present in the universe. The breath becomes a divine symbol of life, a testament to the vibrancy and pulsation of all creation.

Elijah illuminates the path to transcending programmed beliefs and societal constructs that bind us to struggle and limitation. He gently nudges us to recognize that the version of ourselves we yearn to be—our higher self—is already within us, waiting for our surrender to love and magic. This surrender is not a defeat but an embracement of our divine potential, a release from the shackles of self-criticism and doubt. The journey is one of personal responsibility at a soul level, moving beyond mundane tasks to the creation of our own reality. Elijah speaks to the heart, urging us to trust life itself, to embrace the interconnectedness of all existence, and to see the signs and messages the universe provides in every moment.

The vision Elijah shares is one of flow—of being carried by the gentle, yet powerful river of the universe, rather than resisting its course. The flow is not a tumultuous torrent but a peaceful, purposeful stream that guides us towards a fuller, more satisfying existence.

In this divine communion, Elijah calls us to awaken to the sensitivity that sparks creativity and beauty, to let go of control and embrace the dance of life. By surrendering to this flow, we open ourselves to a life rich with meaning, guided by the harmonious rhythm of the cosmos. With blessings and love, Elijah invites us to step into our true selves, to become the creators of a life filled with the magic and wonder of our own making.

Based on the talk by Prophet Elijah channeled by Riz Mirza, here are some key talking points:

1. Breath as a Symbol of Life: The breath is a fundamental symbol of life, emphasizing the importance of conscious breathing and the nourishment it provides to the body.
2. Perception and Technology: Our perception is limited to what our eyes can see, yet technology allows us to surpass these limitations, indicating the potential of human innovation.
3. Programmability of Humans: Humans are inherently programmable, having learned everything from their environment. This suggests that skills and habits are developed, not innate.
4. Struggle vs. Success: There's a common belief that struggle is necessary for success, but this mindset can be limiting and exhausting. The talk encourages reevaluating this belief.
5. Future Self and Potential: The concept of an ideal future self is explored, highlighting the importance of aligning current actions with the aspirations of that ideal self.
6. Surrender and Freedom: Emphasizes the importance of surrendering to one's true potential and the idea that the ideal version of oneself already exists within.
7. Heroes and Role Models: The significance of having heroes or role models is discussed as a source of inspiration and guidance in personal development.
8. Trust and Right vs. Wrong: Trust is questioned as it implies potential failure, and the concept of right and wrong are seen as culturally relative, urging a broader perspective.
9. Surrendering to Life's Flow: Encourages surrendering to the natural flow of life, rather than resisting it, to experience a more fulfilling and magical existence.

10. Sensitivity and Control: Differentiates between authentic sensitivity, which leads to creativity, and sensitivity used as a control mechanism, which can be limiting.

11. Imagining Life's Flow: The visualization of the flow of life as a gentle river, rather than a raging torrent, to promote a sense of peace and ease in navigating life's challenges.

These points reflect the profound themes discussed in the talk, encouraging introspection and a shift in perspective towards personal growth and fulfillment.

I'm Elijah. As far as anyone can tell, you are alive. You are breathing. Certainly, physiologically, you are breathing, but perhaps you are not breathing in the sense that you are fully inspiring air into your lungs, consciously relaxing and taking in those known nutrients that are in the air that nourish the tissues, the bone, indeed, all the systems of the body. That is what oxygen does. And there are other source gasses that also work with the human body. It is not simply just oxygen that you are breathing. And so the breath is the symbol of life. That which is breathing is alive. That is how you test to see if something is alive or dead. For those of you who have had transcendental experiences, you have seen even objects breathe. They appear to be vibrating because they are. They appear to be breathing because they are. Indeed, Life manifests and expresses itself in all that you see that is physical. Every bit of every pulsating atom is life Itself. Expressing itself. Remember something you are only able to perceive with your eyes, which your eyes are designed to physically perceive. For even if you have cameras that are picking things that your eye cannot see, whether it is not fast enough to catch it, or it is not perhaps as sensitive to take in rays of light or variations in light, You have designed technology that has even surpassed your own physical capabilities.

And yet this computer, if you were to use that word, this programmable being that you are. Yes, you are programmable. You learn everything. There is not a thing that you do that you did not learn from somewhere, even putting on your blessed clothes. You learned that, too. Driving your cars, learning how to sit, to pay attention. All of these things were taught to you, and your skills were honed. You wonder what your skills are. Suppose these skills are good enough, and if they should carry you to where you wish to be. Where you wish to be is where you feel you should be, where you deserve to be, where you are destined to be. What does this version of yourself that is growing in the universe mean? That means that there is a version of yourself that is being contributed to by your thoughts, your energy, and your love, of course. And yet you have one picture in your mind of what this version of you could possibly look like because you have your wonderful list of what you need to have and what you need to be for that feeling to come. If the feeling comes, then you have succeeded.

That is what you are interested in, and that is the feeling. It is remarkable how often you feel the opposite way when trying to get the feeling that you want. You want to feel good, and yet you struggle to get to the good. And so, of course, as you've already experienced, it seems further and further away. For you are taught, programmed, perhaps, that it is only through struggle that you shall achieve. And your elders give you much evidence for this. The world at large gives you much evidence for this. Those who work hard are respected, and those who do not work hard, according to what people see, are considered lazy, uninspired, and slow. But if you struggle, perhaps you will be rewarded. This is one of the programs that seems to infiltrate and undermine what you are trying to accomplish now. Those who are gathered here this evening are tired of struggling struggling. And you have crossed the hub. And if you haven't crossed it yet, you are just about to. That's the topic for this evening. Not stopping now. Yes. For a version of you that exists, that is very different. For some of you, it's very different. Some of you are, you might say, closer than others.

Nevertheless, the concept and understanding are the same. You do not know what you are going to be. It does not matter how old you are or are not. You do not know the version of yourself that you shall be, even in a month, even next week. What will you be doing next Thursday? You can. What will you be? Will you be the same? Think of the same things, do the same things, bang your head against the wall the same way, and wait. Whatever it is, if it is not professional, perhaps it is personal. If it's not emotional, perhaps it is physical. But it will be something, for you are creative beings by nature. You simply have got caught up in when. How fast will it happen? Won't it get here already? Well, first you must arrive here. Well, then your reply will be, But I am already here, and that is the problem. I'm stuck here, and I'm sick of being here. What is it? Why can I not get further? What is your definition of further? Well, where I want to be. Where you want to be, is that an emotion? Well, it is an emotion, but there are also certain things that must be there.

Perhaps a partner, perhaps getting rid of a partner, perhaps more money, perhaps a different home, perhaps better health. And how do you propose you are going to achieve that? Do you have anything to say to that version of you? Let us say that version of you, who has all the boxes checked on your list walks into this room right now and sits next to you. A version of yourself walks through that door, looks the way that you want to look, Walks the way that you want to walk, possesses the resume that you wish to possess, possesses the bank account that you wish to possess, has everything that you want. Comes and sits and looks at you. Do you have anything to say to them? Are you going to beg them? What are you going to say as he or she looks right in your eyes? Do you wish for them to encourage you to say you can do it? It would be quite an awkward conversation. Perhaps you will go through your spaces of feeling bad about yourself, that you are not there yet. Perhaps you will look at them and examine them very closely to see if everything is actually in the right place, too, with the very strict standards that all of you have.

You want to see, are they perfect? That is your problem even now, isn't it? You would even criticize or critically look at a version of yourself. Let us say you did not find any flaw at all. They are perfect versions of you. Then what? You will say, Well, I can't wait to be that. We will say, But that is in you now listening to this conversation. Perhaps you have both of their hands in handcuffs, their legs bound, and the gag in their mouth, so they are not the ones actually leading you through this room into your cars and sleeping in your bed tonight. Perhaps it is not them. Perhaps you are the hostage taker. Perhaps there is only one arm that is bound. Perhaps it is just a very loose gag on the mouth. These are very various versions of freedom. And so the key would be to surrender to this inside of you. That version of you exists right here, right now. You only need to surrender to that one. Some religious people, as of late, like to use the term or the question, what would Jesus do? And certainly, if one were to examine that statement, it is very similar to what we are speaking of.

They are using another being for they do not feel imperfection, you see. They only see him as a perfect being. So they say, what would he do? And if he would do it, then I shall do it. Therefore, I will become a perfect being, though I will never be him. And yet that is what he taught. And he said, bless you as well. And so, If you need me, you see, it is wonderful to have heroes in those whom you look up to. It is necessary. If you do not have several heroes, we suggest you get to work and find a few that you admire and that you find to be beautiful and magical. They are very important. We would say it would be difficult to trust a person who has no heroes. Not that they will harm you, but they are certainly harming themselves by doing a great deal of internal dialog that is productive. They do not see anything that they want to be like. There are those who trust animals more than they trust humans, and they are very proud to say that. I like more animals than I like human beings.

They find this to be honoring God. Perhaps that needs some reexamination. You do not need to trust at all. You see, trust is a very interesting word. The definition of what you have given implies that things can go wrong. It's like the word hope. If you hope, it means that a very big part of you has registered that things can go wrong. Even your death is not wrong. Why would it be wrong? Perhaps it would be unfortunate for you. Perhaps there are more things you wish to do. Perhaps those who love you would miss you terribly. But it does not mean it was wrong. That's a very interesting word, but it's wrong. That which is culturally wrong in one country is not culturally wrong in another. There are certain ways that you cannot sit with people in certain countries. It will be considered disrespectful, and in another country, it's quite all right. And so the word right and wrong. You are working on this as a society, not only domestically but globally; you are working on finding some standard of right and wrong. So far, it is that you should not kill each other.

And pretty much everything else is our programs. You have heard people say, in this time of great change, that it is becoming very boring, to say the least. You are, At this very moment, at the precipice of surrendering to this version of yourself. You may call it your higher self if you wish to call it that, but let us say surrendering to the love and the magic that you are. You would not worry. You would be interested in creation. You would not have to trust, you see, because everything is one. You can trust your life. You can trust life itself. You may trust that the unfolding. No one in front of you at any time is meant to be there at any time. If you surrender to this, then you will move through your life and navigate through your life with greater ease, and you will experience a more magical existence, or you will see signs and clues and messages everywhere. Is that too much to process? Would you like to go back to processing the way you did before? Were you even processing it, or were you simply mulling it endlessly and suffering through it?

Going further and further down the rabbit hole, trying to extract information from traumas that you have already understood. Meaning you know what happened to you, and that is it. I Either surrendered to what was part of my soul path or resisted it and fought it. No matter how terrible you may feel it is, that is up to you. This is called personal responsibility, which is on a very different level than what you were taught growing up. Growing up, my personal responsibility was to clean my room and brush my teeth. Things like that. This personal reality is about reality creation. What is it that you fear? Why are you holding on so tight? So, so tightly. Wanting change, but resisting it. That is not how I wanted it to be. You may be close to people who seem to have more energy directed. Can you love them and flow with them.?Rise up to it. Perhaps you are the one who has more energy. And so, indeed, it's correct, as the young man here said earlier, your year is going to be very full. We do not mean busy, for you have been busy before, but full is a feeling.

There is satisfaction. There are times when, if you eat, you are full in four bites, aren't you? But then you continue to eat after that. Check in with yourself to see if you are actually satiated from the few bites of food that you have eaten. If you are not, then go ahead; the body is asking for more. But more often than not, it does not need as much food. And more often than not, it does not need as much of anything, actually. The more sensitive you become, yes, the more sensitive you are. You might be mistaking hypersensitivity or control issues for real sensitivity. The real sensitivity, authentic sensitivity, has created the great works of art that you love. That is authentic sensitivity. Those creators who were sensitive enough to give you beauty. What are you doing with your sensitivity? Are you simply just protecting yourself, waiting for the other person to act differently, speak differently to you in the way that you wish they would speak to you? That sensitivity is simply a control issue. When you are done with those shenanigans, you shall surrender into this wonderful flow. You see, the universe is always flowing.

You are holding onto the rocks. Imagine the flow of a river, and you are holding onto the rocks. Picture it in your mind right now. Now, as you are picturing this, notice if you pictured the river to be raging. Did you notice it? How many of you had a very strong, raging river in your mind? Raise your hands. One or two. So we'll address it to you. Why not? And why did you not see it as simply a peacefully flowing river.? That is because you see the flow as raging. Imagine it as very gentle, strong but gentle, not out of control. Take a breath there, and then you will see that you will experience life more like this flow. Stop now. You're almost there. Bless you.
